Are you an employee or independent contractor?

The rights you have depend on your employment status.

EMPLOYEE

You are likely an employee
if you:

- Work as directed by your employer, who controls how, when, and where you do work
- Are hired to work on a continuing or indefinite basis
- Perform work for a wage, salary, or other type of compensation in amounts set by the employer

PROTECTIONS FOR EMPLOYEES

- Minimum wage, overtime, sick time, meals and breaks
- Protections against retaliation
- Protections against sexual harassment and discrimination
- Protected family and medical leave

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR

You are likely an independent contractor if you:

- Can decide yourself how/when you work and how much you charge
- Provide services for a specific period of time rather than on an open-ended basis
- Have some control over your profit and loss
- Make personal investments, like buying equipment, renting a salon chair, or paying for business expenses or labor

PROTECTIONS FOR INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS

Independent contractors must enforce the terms of their agreements with businesses (including payments and services) in civil court.
